How Companies Can Better Hire and Support Veterans: Lessons from BNSF

Hiring military veterans has become a key priority for many companies seeking dedicated, skilled and reliable employees. BNSF Railway, a leader in the transportation industry, offers a model for how organizations can successfully attract, support and retain veterans. By exploring the strategies and by BNSF, other companies can learn effective ways to build a veteran-friendly workforce that aligns with their goals and values.

Aligning Military Experience with Company Needs

One of the first steps in effectively hiring veterans is recognizing how military skills translate to the private sector. BNSF's Chief Operations Officer, Mark Keel, emphasizes this transition. Before joining BNSF in 1998, Keel served as an Assistant Program Manager (APM) across the country. Through regular career fairs, military base visits and targeted recruitment efforts, BNSF ensures that veterans know they are welcome and valued. For businesses aiming to improve their veteran recruitment, the takeaway is clear: invest in partnerships with organizations that connect directly with transitioning service members and actively engage in outreach.

Creating a Supportive Environment

Retention is an critical in recruitment, and BNSF has created an environment where veterans can thrive. A cornerstone of this effort is its BNSF Business Resource and Training Engagement group, which helps veterans, parents and first responders.

Leveraging Strategic Partnerships

BNSF's partnerships extend beyond recruitment to include organizations that provide ongoing support to veterans. Collaborations with the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs and the U.S. Army Reserve are vital in offering tailored resources for veterans as they transition into civilian employment. For companies looking to enhance their support efforts, several key strategies can be adopted from BNSF's approach:

- 1. Military Skills to Business Roles: Identify how military experience aligns with the roles your organization needs to fill.
- 2. Build Targeted Recruitment Programs: For companies looking to support their veteran hiring and support efforts, several key strategies can be adopted from BNSF's approach:

Supporting Veteran-Owned Businesses

In addition to hiring veterans, BNSF has integrated veteran-owned businesses into its supply chain. Companies like W.S. Wong, a veteran-owned business that provides regional logistics for BNSF's rail operations, highlight the mutual benefits of such partnerships. For BNSF, the military—ground, air and sea—are central to its business success. For companies interested in supporting veteran entrepreneurship, prioritizing veteran-owned suppliers, strengthening supplier diversity and reinforcing a company's commitment to the veteran community.

Emphasizing Recognition and Retention

BNSF's numerous awards, including their recognition from U.S. Veterans Magazine, underscore the company's leadership in veteran employment. These accolades also highlight the importance of creating a workplace culture that values diversity and inclusion. For businesses seeking similar recognition, focusing on consistent, authentic engagement with veterans and fostering an inclusive work environment are essential steps.

Applying BNSF's Strategies

For companies looking to improve their veteran hiring and support efforts, several key strategies can be adopted from BNSF's approach:

- 1. Military Skills to Business Roles: Identify how military experience aligns with the roles your organization needs to fill.
- 2. Build Targeted Recruitment Programs: For companies looking to support their veteran hiring and support efforts, several key strategies can be adopted from BNSF's approach:

Are you looking for your next adventure?

BNSF is a military friendly workplace.

One in five employees has served in a branch of the U.S. armed forces.

At BNSF, we value your service to the country and we know the skills and characteristics that lead to success in the military often translate well to a career in railroading. We're a tight-knit team driven by a common purpose -- to move the freight that moves the nation. Few workplaces offer the chance to make a real impact like BNSF. Apply today.

Captions keep veterans with hearing loss connected

As one of the most common service-connected disabilities, hearing-related issues often go ignored. For veterans, who are already a unique population given their experiences, hearing loss often leads to social isolation and other impacts on daily life. That's why Henderson Capital created the Heroes With Hearing Loss® program – to provide tools and resources for veterans with hearing loss, including next-gen Captioned Telephone solutions that keep veterans connected with what matters most in their lives.
